Kin-first Culture

What is a "Kin-first Culture"?

Kin-first culture exists when systems that engage with children and families consistently prioritize and partner with relatives and extended family members.

Adopt policies, practices, trainings, and accountability structures that:

- Require every effort to keep children safely at home.
- If a child must be removed, partner with the family to identify the safest placement with relatives and extended family member

In a kin-first culture, agencies and families work together to keep children connected to their families, communities, culture, and Tribe.

Kin-first culture gives families and communities the opportunity to heal from trauma together.

Our Approach

CDSS in partnership with UC Davis, launched the Center for Excellence in Family Finding, Engagement, and Support (CFE), to support counties, Tribes, and community-based organizations in strengthening kinship care practices.

This work prioritizes placing children with relatives and maintaining family, community, and cultural connections through training, technical assistance, and resource development. A key component of this initiative is the Excellence in Family Finding, Engagement, and Support Program (EFFES).

Racial Equity

This work is grounded in race equity and builds on the work being done across the state to bring awareness to the need for racial justice; acknowledging that the child welfare system was built on systemic racism and bias, both conscious and unconscious.

Why This Matters

The purpose is to strengthen systems so relatives can step in earlier and more effectively, reducing trauma and promoting stability for children and families. This includes building capacity, improving engagement practices, and ensuring kin caregivers have access to meaningful support.

Key indicators of these efforts include:

- Increased kinship placements and permanency outcomes
- Trauma-informed and culturally responsive approaches
- Children and youth remain connected to family, community, and culture

When did it start and when does it end?

This work has evolved through broader statewide efforts to strengthen kinship care, including the Excellence in Family Finding, Engagement, and Support (EFFES) initiative. The Center for Excellence continues to expand its reach and support the scaling of kin-first practices across counties.

Details:

- The Budget Act of 2022 allocated $150 million in General Fund (One-time funding)
- EFFES funding became available in Fiscal Year 2022–2023
- All funds must be expended by June 30, 2027

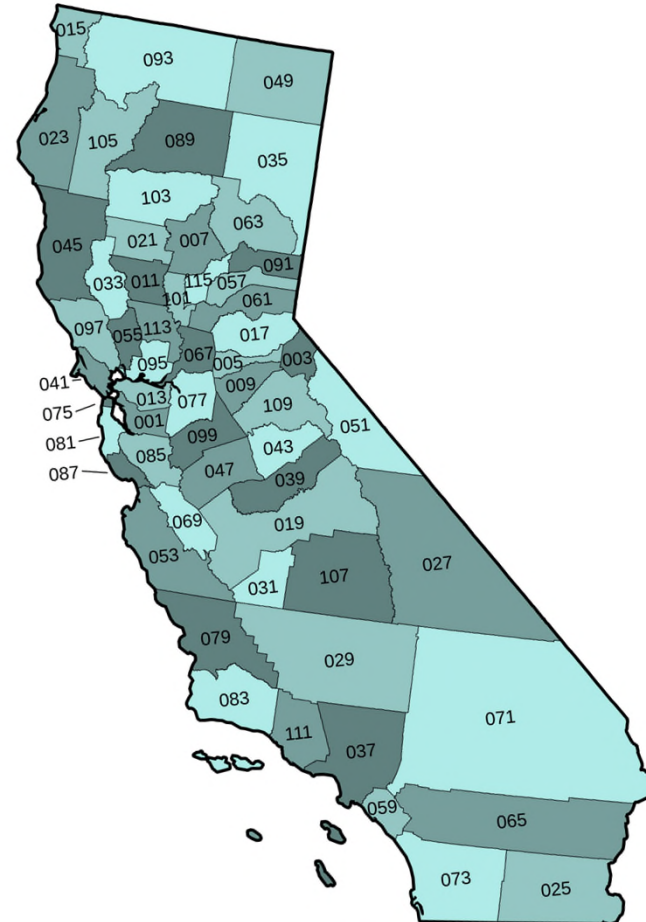

Where We Are

The work is actively underway across multiple counties, with a focus on implementing kin-first practices, strengthening family finding and engagement efforts, and supporting local systems through technical assistance and partnership.

- To date, 47 counties and 36 Tribes are participating in the EFFES Program
- Counties and Tribes are actively:
 - Utilizing funds
 - Participating in trainings and peer collaboratives
 - Advancing kin-first practices

How Counties Are Using EFFES Funds

Strengthening Practice

- Expanding Family Finding & Engagement Staff
Hiring dedicated social workers and specialists to identify and engage relatives early
- Strengthening Training and Practice
Implementing trauma-informed, culturally responsive family finding models; leveraging training and technical assistance
- Embedding Kin-First Practices into Casework
Integrating family finding into case plans, CFT meetings, and ongoing engagement

How Counties Are Using EFFES Funds

Supporting Kin Placements

- Removing Barriers to Kin Placement
Addressing financial, logistical, and relational barriers; utilizing flexible funds and supports
- Building Lifelong Family Connections
Identifying permanent connections when placement with kin is not possible; creating ongoing support networks
- Partnering with Community-Based Organizations
Collaborating with providers (e.g., Seneca, Wayfinder Services, community agencies) to expand capacity

How Counties Are Using EFFES Funds

Driving System Change

- Developing System-Level Change
Advancing a kin-first culture through policy, training, and practice changes
- Exploring New Approaches
Implementing strategies such as Kinship Navigator programs

Kin-first Accelerator Program

"Statewide, we only have 30-40% of youth initially placed with kin, only 50-60% of kids predominantly placed with relatives and only 60-70% of kids have stability. We can do so much better. This is how the Accelerator idea was born. Let's talk about a way to improve these outcomes that is very intentional."

Angie Schwartz, CDSS Deputy Director of Children and Family Services

The KIN Accelerator Pilot advances California's kin-first vision by empowering local county teams to co-design, test and scale solutions that keep children connected to those who know and love them.

- Eight California counties supported by Think of Us; the California Department of Social Services (CDSS); the UC Davis Center for Excellence in Family Finding, Engagement and Support (CFE); and Casey Family Programs are embarking on this shared journey.
- Modeled after proven approaches from the technology and social impact fields, the Accelerator blends customized support, data-driven learning and local insight to move faster and smarter toward a kin-first child welfare system.

Accelerator Impact Areas & Outcomes

Counties participating in the Accelerator identified key focus areas to strengthen kin first practices, with targeted outcomes to drive measurable change.

Impact Areas:

- Prevention: Fewer children enter or remain in non-relative care
- Practice Change: Earlier, proactive family finding and engagement
- Equity: More culturally connected placements for impacted communities
- Systems Change: Policies and workflows support kin-first placement

Intended Outcomes:

- Increase first placement with kin from day one
 - Improve early identification and engagement of relatives
 - Reduce delays and barriers to kinship placement
 - Strengthen consistent, kin-first decision-making at intake

Prevention in Action

This work supports prevention by engaging relatives early and intentionally, helping children remain connected to their families and communities whenever possible. By strengthening these connections and supports, it reduces the likelihood of placement disruptions and deeper system involvement.

What does prevention in action look like?

- Keeping children safely with family, reducing the need for foster care entry
- Promoting early family engagement and identification of kin
- Strengthening family networks to prevent placement disruptions
- Addressing barriers before they escalate into system involvement

What This Means for Families

By prioritizing family connections and strengthening support for kin caregivers, this work helps create stable, nurturing environments where children and families can thrive. It recognizes that strong relationships and trusted support systems are key to long-term safety and well-being.

What does creating a safe future look like?

- Promoting family unity and healing from trauma
- Ensuring children maintain lifelong connections
- Supporting equity, especially for disproportionately impacted communities
- Building systems that partner with families rather than separate them

How You Can Take Action

- Take a closer look at how relatives are currently identified and engaged
- Strengthen relationship-based engagement practices
- Partner with community-based organizations to build trust with families
- Identify opportunities to embed kin-first approaches into everyday practice
- Connect with CFE for support, tools, and technical assistance
